HOPE IS IN THE AIR

The ultimate winter scent, Hope Night Parfum ($300) combines plum and patchouli. The vibe is sophisticated yet delicious. Even better, 100 percent of the profits benefits depression research.

FIND YOUR LIGHT

Mix iNNBeauty Project Face Glaze ($24) with your moisturizer or makeup to get a glow, without sparkle. Another reason we love this new brand? Every item sold funds the removal of plastic from oceans and landfills.

HEATING THINGS UP

T3 debuts a smarter, gentler hot tool with Curl ID ($235), a curling iron that automatically adjusts the level of heat depending on your hair's texture, length, and even color treatment.

OUT OF AFRICA Born in Madagascar, Dr. Stephan Helary has long had a passion for studying the power of indigenous botanicals, and Terres d'Afrique is the culmination of that research. These rare, responsibly sourced ingredients can be found in its spa-worthy products like Light Facial Cream ($85) and Calming Cleanser ($45).

NEWS

GOING THE DISTANCE Lash-growing serums have been trendy, but Talika pioneered the category in 1948, when an ophthalmic nurse discovered that the plant-based cream she formulated for burns on the eye contour also stimulated lash growth. The result: Lipocils, the cult botanical lash serum. Now Talika has created Lipocils Mascara ($35), shown to boost length by almost 30 percent in two months.

AT YOUR FINGERTIPS

More time indoors means more opportunies to master the at-home manicure. Peacći, a new brand out of the U.K., delivers rich, long-lasting polish in just one coat ($12.50). Another must-have: Peacći's athome gel removal kit ($26.50). ■
